THE SHOW-BOOM FOR EVENING SILES, referred to above, is a novel and attrac tive feature of the establishment. Ladies know the difficulty of judging, and the effect of a strong giare of gas-light upon ireas fabrics by an examination in day ight. To overcome this the Messrs, Low eastein have fitted up a charming little apartment, from which the light of day can be entirely excluded, and a blaze of gaslight substituted, thus enabling the better to judge at mid-day of the effect of he colors of the fabrics shown. This oudoir displays to good advantage, in liappointments and ornamentation the excellent taste of the Messra, Lowenstein. THE OPENING DAY

A NORMAL SCHOOL FOR COLORED PEOPLE.

The Le Moyne normal school for colored people was dedicated to its uses yesterday by soveral persons of note among the colored population. The place is situated on Lauderdale street, beyond Beale a good distance. The house was built at the expense of a Pennsylvania man named Le Moyne who made a grant of some money for the purpose. It is a two and a half store purpose. It is a two and a half story frame, of considerable dimensions, and capable of affording means for the training of a hundred pupils to became teachers, both male and female. The house is complete now, and will go into operation in a short time. The dedication ceremonies were effected yesterday very pleasantly, and with entire satisfaction to all hands. There was a air crowd of spectators and participants present. The Ayery chapel choir furnished the music in excellent style. ent style. The opening prayer was of-fered by the Rev. Morris Honderson. J. H. Barnum spoke about the history and objects of the school in a praiseworthy manner. The dedicatory prayer, a model of elequence and fine composition, was spoken by Rev. N. W. Mallory, a learned applied by Nev. A divine from the other side of the Ohio, it is said, sA speech was delivered on the apirit and alms of the founder and ampporters of the institution, which was well received.

The ceremonies opened at 20'clock, and the ceremones opened at 20 clock, and continued to near dark.

It is a curious fact, equally creditable to the colored people and their benefactors, that this is the first normal school that has been established here. The wish of every right-minded person is that it may prosper.

The new establishment of Mr. Coll, at 278 Main street, just now emerging from the contusion and chaos incident upon the operations of a number of busy-fingered mechanics, will be one of the most attractive features of the Broadway of Memphis, Directly opposite Court Square, it is a fit vis-a-vis to the beautiful park. Mr. W. S. Matthews, a master builder weil qualified for the work, had entire charge of the work of altering and arranging the building for its new occupant, and his handiwork does him luficite credit. The front of the building, to a

The front of the building, to a hight of twenty-six feet, was removed, a wrought-iron girder—roiled at one of the Pittsburg mills expeable of sustaining three-fourths more weight than is upon it—was inserted as a support, a supplementary wall erected eleven feet back from the front, forming a vestibnic eighteen feet wide, twenty-six feethigh and eleven feet long. In the middle of this is a kloak, constructed, middle of this is a klosk, constructed, except the top, of French plate glass, the front being one troad sheet of ten feet six inches in hight, and five feet in breadth. The ceiling is finished to match the frescoing of the interior of the main building, and the bars which keep the heavy plates of glass in place are heavily plated in silver. The base is finished in burnished white metal, upon which is incribed, in black ena-mel, the legend of the house. The whole forms the prettiest show-win-dow (if so it can be termed) in the city; goods therein displayed can be seen from all sides and any shade of light from all sides and any shade of light be brought to bear.

However much the display of taste at the entrance may captivate one, the effect is not lost by an advance into the interior. The wainscoting is ela-borately frescoed in oil colors, the tinta harmonizing pleasantly with those used in the decorations of the entrance and show-window, and the counters, shelving, etc. To have a building in the middle of a block more accessable to light would a block more accessible to light would seem impossible. Mirrors in rear of and above the entrance are piaced at angles that will reflect light on the goods nearest, while the rear of the store has been made transparent by large windows. To fill the place of Old Sol, at night, the unique and teateful caseful times furnished by tasteful gas-fittings furnished by Lunn, of Second street, are amply sufficient.

The second and third floors, reached by a model spiral staircase, are filled with goods awaiting the completion of the arrangements below stairs. A noticeable feature of the second floor are the stained and enameled glass windows exquisite in their beauty, and deserving of a more prominent place, though those who have occasion to visit the luxuricusty furnished cloak room, on this floor, will have an opportunity to appreciate the pains taken to make it attractive. To insure the comfort of his patrons, Mr. Coll has pisced in the basement a

The opening day has been fixed for next Tuesday, when the ladies will be able to see and judge for themselves of the complete and artistic maner in which Mr. Coll has prepared his establishment for their especial delecta-

There is -- not to be too modest about it -a sort of lottery connected with the coming great Memphis fair. Tickets are sold at $2, which not only serve to admit holders to the amphitheater, but give them a chaucs to draw moneyed prizes varying in amount from $6 to $1000. Ten thousand dollars are to be distributed, and varying in amount from 36 to $1000. Ten thousand dollars are to be distributed, and the fairness of the great game of chance is assured by the committee of the association to which the conduct of the matter and turning of the wheel of fortune are entrusted. The buyer of these tickets gets his money's worth by having access to the trotting course, on which will appear, on successive days, the finest and fleetest horses in America. And then all the pretty women from this and a hundred other lowns, will be congregated in dazzling array to charm and startle those fortunate people who gain access to the charmed circle of a thousand wonders, the products of mechanical and agricultural art and industry. The profits of the scheme of distribution will be applied to the perfection of the buildings and grounds belonging to the association. It is proposed to erect on the beautiful spot another collectin, an amphitheater of Vespalan, of whom President Thompson is the legitimate successor, Colonei son is the legitimate successor, Colone Trousdate being the Mecsenss to his imperial myjesty. The exertions of these two dignitaries in behalf of the success of the fair must command boundless success. Multitudes of people will be gathered here, and with successive years these numbers will grow greater, until, when our railway system Our friend from the hoop-pole State been most wonderful. It shows how eagerly the young men of the city and country acquire that species of information and skill which adapts them to mercantile pursuits and is indispensable to success. The institution is devoted exclusively to the inculcation of those truths and branches of learning which make the mere trader an accomplished merchant. Such lessons are taught in the shortest possible time, and at the least possible cost. Book-keeping, of course, constitutes a specialty of Mr. Robertson's curriculum, in which many a youth may drive on to fortune. The methods of instruction are simple, practical and infallibly successful. We commend the Business College to the young men of this city. A new dry goods house, composed of some of the oldest and most trusted merchants of Memphis before our late troubles, has been opened at 312 Main street, opposite the Peabody, during the past week—that of Speed, Taylor, Strange & Co., and composed of Messra J. H. Speed, John H. Taylor, J. P. Strange and Levi Joy. Their names are too well known in West Tennessee and the South generally to need comment. They were all originally dry goods men, thoroughly trained in that business, and they understood the market. We expect such a rush trained in that business, and they understood the market. We expect such a rush to their handsomely-appointed rooms, as they deserve from their high character and their eminent canacity. atreet, having secured the services of Mrs. Abbott, so long and favorably known for
